

ASSOCIATE EDITOR'S LETTER TO THE READER

Jerold Bozarth

This issue of the journal will be my last official association with it although I will be available to Jeanne for any help I might provide. My role as an Associate Editor was primarily that of helping with the transition to a new editor and to serve as a link with the publisher which is in Athens.

Jeanne has the journal well in control and has more direct contact and a relationship with the publisher than previously thought possible. It seems more expedient for her to deal directly with them. I will be available if there are any glitches in the coordination with them.

It has also become clear that other work roles for Associate Editors are more important at this time. I have suggested and encouraged Jeanne to immediately appoint two more Associate Editors for other tasks. Following the mandate and freedom given to the editor by the association, she has engaged two of the editorial reviewers to work with her on the next issues in addition to Associate Editor, Barry Grant.

I have appreciated the opportunity to contribute to the journal, to be part of the initiation of it and to work with all of you. Thank you for your trust and support.
